CURES OTHERS

A TERRIBLE CASE OF DROPSY CURED.
JNO. MALLON, Esq., No. 81 McLean St., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I took sick with dropsy, lost my appetite, could not sleep, became feverish; always stomachic became painful, breath short and had to give up work. The best physicians in St. Louis failed to help me. My limbs and body were swollen to enormous size, and I was suffering terrible agony. The doctors said I could not get well again, that I was liable to drop dead at any moment. My wife sent for the priest, to prepare me for death. While waiting for death, I remembered reading of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and thought I would try it as a last hope. When I had taken three bottles, I was almost well. The swelling entirely disappeared and I was soon able to resume work. My health is better now than it has been in twenty-five years."

LONGSTREET TELLS TWO TALES

On being asked to recall an instance of martial courage General Longstreet said:

"About one of the most remarkable exhibitions of courage which ever came to my personal observation occurred during the Mexican war at the battle of Resaca de la Palma. I was then with General Taylor, on the 9th day of May, 1846, when he ordered his dragoons, under Captain Charlie May, to charge the enemy's batteries. Randolph Ridelgey, who commanded our battery, as May was about to charge, called to him, 'Hold on, Charlie, until I draw their fire.' I do not know any more interesting case of courage and gallantry than that of Ridelgey when he called on me to give him the privilege of drawing the fire that was ready for May upon himself. May made the charge successfully and got the batteries of the enemy, and as a result we were victorious that day. I do not know of anything which was so fraught with true nobility and absolute fearlessness as this act of Ridelgey's. Both of these men were beautiful characters. Can I give you as good an instance of mercy? Yes, hundreds. On one occasion at the battle of Gettysburg, as our Confederate lines were advancing, they met with a temporary check. Our troops were firing from behind rocks, and the enemy advancing behind rocks, also, and firing upon us. Just a little in front of our line where my men stood was a wounded northern soldier, calling frantically for water. A Confederate soldier stepped from behind his shelter, leaving his gun, and held up his hand as a signal to stop firing. The union troops stopped when they saw his signal, and he ran forward and gave the wounded Yankee his canteen of water, raised his head on his arm, until he had drained the contents of the canteen, then restoring him tenderly to his reclining position on the ground, ran back behind the rocks where he had been and resumed the battle. The enemy's line resumed firing at the same time, and this simple act of mercy passed amid the greater incidents of that terrible day, and doubtless of the hundreds who witnessed it but few live to remember or relate the occurrence."

"The bravest and best man with whom I came in contact during the war, two great conflicts were Christian men, and I believe the better Christian a man is the braver, truer and nobler he is in private and public life. I do not see how a man can be brave or useful unless he is a Christian."

TO RETURN TO SOCIETY.—"Man of Leisure" writes in the New York Commercial Advertiser:

I have been reading of and listening for some time to the various reports about the domestic affairs of the Brown-Potters, a subject which seems to have been revived recently. Mrs. Brown-Potter to a great extent lost many of her fashionable acquaintances by her adopting the stage as a profession, but the recent talk concerning a probable reconciliation with her husband is not all smoke, as some people would have us think. Although the Urquharts have stuck by her the rest of her family had for years dropped her. Last winter, however, her aunt, Mrs. Dr. Richardson, of New Orleans, who has always been one of James Brown-Potter's sympathizers, took her up and said to all her friends that Cora had gone on the stage to make a living for herself and child and that she had been most unjustly criticised. Mr. Potter had not enough money and Mrs. Potter had his permission and his sanction. This is of course an old story, but to add to this there comes another, and this from James Brown-Potter's friends, that after a year more of the stage, or perhaps a bit longer, Mrs. Potter will retire in time for her daughter's debut in society. She will again take her place in her husband's household. At present she is all devotion to her art, and intends to star in a new play next year and perhaps the year succeeding. These stories have some foundation, and I do not think that James Brown-Potter would care a fig what his straight-laced relatives thought of him if he chose to receive his wife again. Besides, no one knows if there has been an actual separation—that is a legal one.
